Mr. D. D. Neal, Jr., says: "I spent a day in Durham, N. C., and I saw the meanest break of tobacco that I ever saw in my life. A break of ten thousand pounds did not average $4.50."

"I visited Oxford and found some few little short bright tobaccos (cutters and smokers), which were selling outrageously high. I also visited Henderson, N. C., where I found exactly the same state of affairs; all concurring in the statement that there would be but few wrappers in the crop, and a majority of the people with whom I talked said the new crop was far worse than they had thought it would be. They also said in Henderson and Oxford, N. C., that the farmers were now selling the best of the new crop, as the common tobaccos were not bringing any money."
